"Is there Scotland in Space?" Using Time Travel to Critique Brexit in Doctor Who by Christine D. Myers DePaul Pop Culture Conference, May 2023

"They're cross; they're crosser than the rest of my face. They're independently cross. They probably want to cede from the rest of my face and set up their own independent state of eyebrows."

in Heaven, the season finale which aired on Saturday 8 November 2014, seemed to answer that on when the Doctor's companion Clara Oswald referred to his Glasgow degree. While pretending to be octor in an effort to save herself from an army of Cybermen, one of the planet's deadliest enemies, she don't even really have a doctorate. Well Glasgow University, but then I accidentally graduated in the century.'

Brexit voters delayed woman Doctor Who, says Steven Moffat | News ... https://www.thetimes.co.uk/.../brexit-voters-delayed-woman-doctor-who-says-steven-mo... Dec 4, 2017 - The creative force behind Doctor Who says he resisted casting a female Time Lord for so long because the show had to retain viewers who "voted for Brexit".Steven Moffat has written and produced the BBC science fiction series since 2009, recruiting Matt Smith and then Peter Capaldi to succeed David ...

Steven Moffat says Brexit is why he never cast a woman as the Doctor https://mashable.com/2017/12/05/steven-moffat-brexit-doctor-who/ -

Dec 5, 2017 - With all due respect to Capaldi, who has been a tremendous Doctor, Moffat's reasoning doesn't hold much any weight, especially since the Brexit vote only happened 18 months ago and was, in reality, not a very progressive move by the UK at all, so what in the world has changed that now makes it — you ...

Doctor Who "isn't a show exclusively for progressive liberals; this is also for people who voted Brexit. That's not me politically at all — but we have to keep everyone on board." – Steven Moffat, Radio Times
